MISS BELLE BUFORD

A Message To "Miss Belle"—Our Beloved Teacher

"Where duty calls, it matters not What be the task, the time, the spot; Her's but to ask what is His will, She goes where duty calls."

Es, she does indeed hold the torch of Duty ever before her, at home, and abroad—a shining example to all, unfaltering and unafraid, she treads her way.

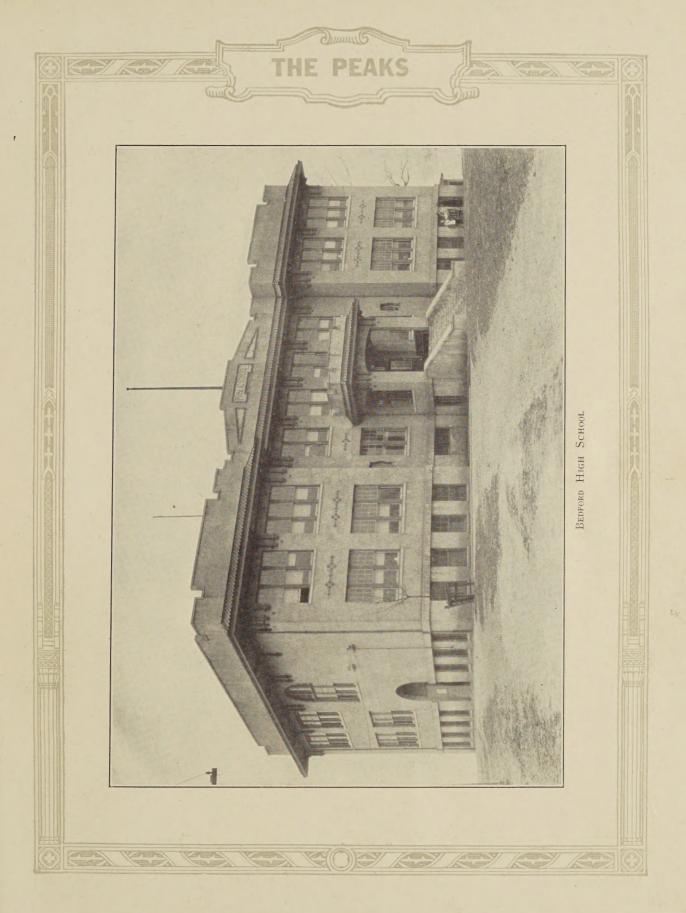

We wonder how so small and delicate a form can maintain such wonderful mentality which still imparts to others a farreaching knowledge.

Those who have the good fortune to come under the influence of her teaching, will possess thereafter a gift which naught can take away.

We who are to "Leave our out-grown shells by life's unresting sea," will take with us a heart filled with the deepest appreciation, respect, and love for this beloved Teacher. THE PEAKS

Class Poem

By VIRGINIA WHIPPLE

Sooner or later you will forget

All your High School trouble—and yet—

In spite of the hours we have shaken with fear,

When the time for exams was drawing near,

And some of us were so afraid

We wouldn't be able to make the grade,

Old B. H. S. holds a thousand cheers

That will remain in after years.

The class in Virgil loves Mrs. Brown,

Tho' we'd quake with fear when she would frown;

We love Miss Bell with a memory dear,

And leave her with a parting tear;

I can't express in words to-night

How we know Mr. Borden has treated us right.

So we are leaving you with much regret

And know you will hear from us vet.

You may think the Seniors are a bunch of hicks,

But there never was a class like '26.

Sooner or later you will forget

All the lessons you've learned—and vet—

Never mind the bye and bye,

Sooner or later-so will I.

N the night of October 25th, the Juniors entertained the Seniors at a Hallow'een masquerade party given at the home of Katherine Geering. The house was attractively decorated to suit the occasion. About 9:00 o'clock the fun began and proms were the chief entertainment. An old graveyard proved to be the favorite retreat for the couples. Most of the promenaders visited the old witch by the fireplace to have their fortune told, and also tried their luck at the Kitchen Contest. Billy Rucker had the best success in guessing what kind of spice the little bags held and won first prize. Elizabeth Spradlin captured the girl's first prize with her beautiful blue pierrette costume, and Bob Morrison dressed as a Spanish cavalier won the boy's prize. About 11:30 o'clock orange ice and little chocolate cakes were served, and the party broke up at 12:00.

FRESHMAN CLASS

The Contest

The Class of '29, being a notoriously clever one, decided to match their wits in a contest.

The competitors were Room 35 and Room 30.

Each subject counted 10, and deportment 40. Order in line and cleanliness also counted 10. Room 30 won in deportment, Algebra, Science, order in line and cleanliness which netted them 80 points. Room 35 won in Latin, English, and History which netted them 30 points.

Although Room 35 was hopelessly defeated, they were good sports, for they entertained Room 30 at a picnic at Forbes' Mill which both classes enjoyed very much.

We hope that our successors to the Freshmanship will wage war in the form of a contest, because it is not only fun, but also beneficial.

ords can not express the great benefits derived from the Junior and Senior Literary Societies in our school. The training of pupils in self-confidence, public speaking, etc., are their chief attributes. Great orators have been discovered through the channels of Literary Societies. Latent talents of various kinds have come to light under its activity. Literary Society has enabled boys and girls to handle subjects which appalled them until the influence of this wonderful Society had instilled in them the power to lose sight of self in developing the strength of their undertaking.—Membership:

Prologue:—The show opens with a scene of Barnyard revels, consisting of Dolly Extreme and the chorus girls. Father Time enters and they send for Good Fortune to help them settle Earth's affairs. Father Time and Good Fortune decide to visit one of the modern homes.

In a modern home they find Bully and Meekness, an up-to-date married couple, quarreling for something new. Dolly and her friends are also complaining about the lack of excitement. They do not appreciate Cupid and the other wonderful blessings which have been bestowed on Earth, so they are banished to a land where Science holds complete sway, and Cupid disappears. They enter a machine invented by Senator Bing, and are changed into other forms. John Scientist discovers a powder to stimulate the memory and they long for the old world where Cupid reigned supreme. Good Fortune and Father Time having taught Earth's people a lesson, transfer them back to the old world, and restore happiness to all at Dolly Extreme's birthday party.
